

In this talk, I will review our current knowledge of winds from young stars, and their feedback on star, disk, and planet formation. Observed "wind" signatures include both fast and highly-collimated ionized "jets" and slower rotating molecular outflows surrounding the jets. I will highlight recent results from JWST, ALMA, and numerical simulations that shed new light on their origins and impact.